Born in Baltimore Md. In 1954, Rob moved to the Outer Banks in 1974 and worked as a heavy equipment operator until 1978 . He then began work in the fish packing industry of Wanchese N.C.

Around the turn of the decade ,the fish packing industry no longer held it's allure....but the world of construction beckoned.

So Rob picked up his hammer, toolbag,and airbrush,and began a new career as a construction worker and part time muralist, becoming self taught in fine art along the way.

After honing his skills for the next ten years he made the shift of trade again. While driving along the158 By -Pass and seeing and "End Construction" sign, he took the hint and began screenprinting, painting murals ,and working in oils and acrylics. Rob is self taught comes from a tumultuous background and hopefully faces an uncertain future. He and his wife Debbie have traveled extensively in the Caribbean which has had an influence in his art.

His initial inspiration is derived from the sea and the shifting sandbar he has inhabited since 1973.
